UNIONISTS BATTLE WITH OFFICERS IN BUDAPEST STRIKE

Sharp Conflicts Between Police and Strikers Were Frequent on the Streets Today—Two Strikers Killed and Many Wounded.

Budapest, Hungary, May 23.—Sharp battles between police and strikers have been frequent all over the city throughout the morning. Two strikers have been killed and many police and strikers wounded, twenty-five of the latter severely. Practically all the trade unionist workers in Budapest, with the exception of municipal employees, struck work this morning as a result of a resolution passed last night by the socialist union which proclaimed a general strike as a protest against the election of Count Tisza as speaker of the lower house. Count Tisza is a strong opponent of universal suffrage. Fifty thousand workmen assembled this morning in the streets leading to Parliament Square, all the approaches of which were guarded by strong squadrons of police. The strikers, finding their efforts to obtain possession of Parliament Square unavailing, started wrecking windows and street lamps, and destroying goods displayed in shop windows. Then they began stoning the police who drove them off repeatedly, charging with their clubs. The most serious encounter occurred on Outer Wagner street where the strikers took possession of a big building from which they fired at the police with revolvers. After several policemen had been hit with bullets the officer-in-charge ordered the men to return the fire. Several volleys were fired into the crowd and two of the strikers were killed and a dozen wounded. The strikers in the building, unable to withstand the sharp reply of the police, dashed out of the doors and fled in all directions. Several of the street car lines have been suspended since morning. The strike has been only partially successful, many of the factories continuing to work under protection of detachments of police.

"I will not allow anyone to fill a gasoline stove while it is lighted, or by artificial light."

College athletes will play a larger part in the Olympic games this year than ever before, in the opinion of the American committee. The American college men who are regarded as almost certain point winners this year include:

George Horine, Stanford; H. B. Wagner, Yale; John Paul Jones, and Ted Borna of Cornell; Charley Macphail, Syracuse; J. Nicholson, Missouri; A. L. Patterson, Vermont; H. H. Babcock and H. L. Healy, Columbia.

Bombardier Wolfe, England's greatest heavyweight, has arrived in America. He is anxious to fight Jack Johnson and says after he has laid out a few other American heavies, he will challenge him.

Bob Burman, holder of most of the short distance auto speed records, and Barney Oldfield have been matched for a 100-mile race at Brighton beach, June 15 or 22.

Robert Lee Hyatt, star of the Army football and baseball teams, will join the Detroit Tigers about June 15. His pitching this year is better than ever before.

Billy Pupko and George Carpenter will meet in a 20-round go in Paris on Grand Prix day, June 26.

Here are a few side-lights on Ty Cobb: He was born in Royton, Ga., 27 years ago, broke into the major league at the age of seventeen, against the wishes of parents, who thought he was making his life a failure by going into baseball. Detroit secured him from the South unless he forsook over $3000 duty on a league game was played in 1901 at Augusta, Ga. He weighs 176 pounds and is 5 feet 11 inches tall. He bats left-handed but throws with his right. He takes an interest in politics and is a free Democrat. Last winter he spent several weeks on the stage.

Jack Johnson may be some heavy-weight, but he seems to be looking out in a little encounter that he is now having with Uncle Sam. The government has notified him that unless he forsook over $3000 duty on a diamond necklace which he recently attempted to smuggle into this country, he may be placed in a position where it will be hard for him to get at Jim Flynn on July 4.

Manager Jimmy Callahan of the Chicago White Sox, says that Ed Walsh will be as good a pitcher in 1912 as he is now. Major league scouts have been looking over the playing timber in the college ball clubs, and have found what they consider some very good material. Pitcher George Davis of the Williams College team, has received good offers from the New York and Chicago American League clubs and from the Pittsburgh Nationals.

FAITHFUL SERVICE.

Here's a little railroad story from the "Technical World," that will be appreciated by railroad men. It is a human interest story that has to do with faithfulness in humble service, and is suggestive of mutual independence and mutual helpfulness. The man with the lantern on the track, the man in the cab, and the president, in his private car, are brothers of one common family, and there are times when the relationship is not difficult to recognize. The story follows:

"A special train was humming through the night over the wind-swept beach-side tracks of the Southern Pacific company's coast line between San Francisco and Los Angeles. Trudging ahead of the train, between the rails and carefully inspecting every foot of the roadbed by the light of his lantern, went a humble employee of the company named Abe Jenkins. It was Abe's business to see that the track was in proper shape for the passage of trains. As he walked out upon a bridge he saw the dark figure of a man bob up from between the ties in the middle of the structure and run quickly toward the opposite side. Abe ran after the man, seized him and would have captured him but that another man appeared and beat him off. While these two were vanishing in the darkness Abe walked back to the middle of the bridge and there he found on a cross-piece under the ties a box with a rope protruding from it. He opened the box and in it found thirty-nine sticks of dynamite. The rope was a ten-foot fuse.

"And now down the line and out upon the bridge alone the big electric headlight of the special. Abe stepped aside with the box in his hands, the train thundered out upon the bridge and whirled by him while he lifted his cap. And the reason why he lifted his cap was because he knew that in a car of that train, little dreaming of the plots of anarchists, or of any danger whatsoever, was the President of the United States.

"It is not every trackwalker who has had the honor of saving the life of a President, or at least of rendering him so great a service, but trudging up and down their lonely beats, many patrolmen of the rails have saved thousands and thousands of lives of lesser persons. You in your overhauling Pullman berth, on a stormy winter night rarely, if ever, give a thought to the men walking the man walking the roadbed ahead of your train, facing the blizzard while his bright lantern gleams along the double row of rails, looking for loose planks, for high joints, for broken culverts, for track obstructions or whatever else might prove of danger in your swift flight through the darkness. But ahead of you there, safeguarding your way, the trackwalker tramps his cold, dismal beat, with wrench and oil can and lantern, with alert eye and ready hand to repair, if it is in his power, whatever damage has been wrought by the elements or by the heavily grinding wheels, and, if he cannot repair it, to set signals for the engineer and to summon the roadmaster and his gang.

"At all seasons and at all hours these careful inspectors are on the job and the number of disasters they avert in the course of a long term of years is incalculable."

BUSINESS CONDITIONS.

A financial journal makes the following terse statement of the business situation:

"There is no remarkable change in the business situation. But every day makes it clearer that business interests refuse to be further frightened by developments that have frightened them in the past two years. It is plain that the business world is moving forward, slowly, but yet perceptibly.

"The same hand-to-mouth policy is still in evidence, but this very fact is disclosing the small stocks on hand, and the demand is perceptible.

"Looking over the whole field there is small ground for complaint. To be sure, profits continue small, but the tendency all the time is for better conditions in this respect.

"Labor as a rule is well employed and at higher wages, which means larger consumption. Farmers have been prosperous and farmers spend money.

"The business situation is feeling today the good average crops of last year. Good crops this year would mean a further trade expansion in 1913.

"Reports from the iron and steel trade are more encouraging. There is a larger demand for steel all the time by railroads as well as for construction material. This demand is bound to make for higher prices in time.

"In the textile industry the outlook is brighter. Mills are fairly busy, and those who have bought their cotton are making satisfactory profits.

"Very few complaints are heard from the boot and shoe business.

"The woolen mills are busy."

"The adverse legislation, which has prevailed during the past few years, has developed a spirit of caution in the business world, which has led to retrenchment, and conservative action, all along the line. As a result the average business man today has his business well in hand. He is no longer a speculator, and he has taken no chances in piling up stock for the future.

The policy of a new administration fails to worry him, for he has become accustomed to changes and most of his time has been devoted to meeting changed conditions.

Radicalism is the watchword, and business has contended with it until the future has been freely discounted, so far as any new revolution is concerned. It has been taxed and regulated to the limit of endurance, and any sort of a change might prove a relief. With a good crop there will be plenty of business, and there is no occasion for alarm.

Senator Murray Crane, the old republican leader from Massachusetts, has taken to the tall timber, and Tom Lawson, of "frenzied finances" fame, applies to be his successor. The political map of the country begins to look like a crazy quilt, and the end is not yet. The coming campaign is liable to display an army of deserters and camp followers, such as has not been witnessed in half a century. Too much prosperity has played havoc with political parties, and the atmosphere is charged with reform, with no holiday in sight.

There are three factions today, in the republican party. The administration, led by President Taft; the progressive, championed by Colonel Roosevelt; and the insurgent, antagonistic to both, with Senator La Follette in command. The contest, so far as the leaders and managers are concerned, is at white heat, and no thought of compromise is entertained. In the meantime the rank and file of the party is not very much interested. There is lack of organization and old time enthusiasm, due to an overdose of reform.

The democrats of Ohio are to be congratulated for their support of Harmon, for it keeps him in the race and may result in placing his name at the head of the ticket at the Baltimore convention. If radicalism prevails, at the Chicago convention, the democratic party, if wise, will recognize the importance of conservative action. Harmon is the most conservative candidate on their list, and commands the respect of this class of men, regardless of party.

Colonel Roosevelt's victory in Ohio makes him more confident of success, and his managers are now discussing the advisability of capturing the Chicago convention through the use of the recall. If this is done it will change the complexion of the republican national committee, and place the colonel in control. That he is determined to win the nomination, is very evident, and he may succeed.

EXHIBITION TO SHOW EVOLUTION OF TRAVEL.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
New York, May 23.—To demonstrate the evolution of transportation methods, especially in the United States and Canada, is the object of the Travel and Vacation Exhibition, which was opened in the Grand Central Palace today under the auspices of the Transportation Club of New York. The exhibition, which is the first of its kind ever held in this country, will continue for one week. Many historical relics, originals and models, lent by the Navy Department, the Smithsonian Institution and numerous steamship and railroad companies are included in the display. The sledges used by Peary in his trip to the North Pole are to be seen among the exhibits referring to exploration. Another section is devoted to the exhibition of appliances for minimizing accidents in railway and steamship travel.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

By Roy K. Moulton.

The Cannibal King.
The fates are kind to the Cannibal king.
And life to him is a real soft thing.
He worries not over the change in style.
For his main attire is a winning smile.
He's the sovereign of a sun-kissed land.
Where weather is always simply grand.
He owes no bill for a new spring suit.
And he wears a string for a robe de nuit.

His wives don't hanker for new spring hats.
And clothes cause him no domestic squats.
He doesn't spend all he makes on coal.
And prices high don't disturb his soul.
The cost of living is an amusing song.
For tourists will always happen along.
Do you wonder, folks, at the pleasant smile,
Of the reigning king of the Cannibal Isle?

Caught on the Fly.
King Alfonso has quarreled with his queen, which shows that there is just about as much human nature in some married couples as there is in others. If not a little more.

Reports from Boston state that copper are not strong. But it seems as though they would have to be in order to lift some people into the patrol wagon.

There are nearly 3,000 Johnsons in Chicago. That family seems to be gradually getting a corner on the vital statistics.

Champ Clark is now president of a Greek letter fraternity, which is better than not being president at all. The engagement of Lillian Russell has been announced. Then not all of the men married her after all.

Of course, it will be said those Flavelmeyer children are born with sugar spoons in their mouths.

Women.
They're sunny and they're fickle and they're mighty hard to please.
We have to cater to them all.
Upon our heads be it known.
They're fussy and inquisitive.
Especially, too.

And every man must find it out somehow before he's through.
They reason with a suddenness that makes a fellow jump.
And they don't find it hard at all to make him look a clump.

They cannot give a reason for a single thing they do.
They jump at a conclusion with no valid cause in view.
They're fussy and they're fickle; sometimes it seems that way.
They're tender and they're heartless, and they're proud and they're reckless, and in faults they all abound.
They cost a lot of money, but they're slow to have around.

Here's a Rare Avis.
A remarkable record is credited to a housemaid in New York who has completed fifty years of faithful service in one family during which she has had but one day off. Every member of the family, to the second and third generation, was proud to show her honor, and the fiftieth anniversary was made a notable family celebration.

Exactly as it should have been, Princess Eulalie of Spain said "sometime ago that the American people were slaves of their servants." If this housemaid in New York has tyrannized over the family for fifty years the master and mistress and the children and grandchildren adopted a peculiar way of showing their rebellious resentment.

TO A YOUNG MAN.
What are you worth?
If you should die how much in cash would the world lose by your death?
Experts have figured it all out. According to the figures, the life of a laborer who earns on the average $1.50 per day at the age of thirty, the period when his labor is most valuable, is worth to the world the sum of $3,217.03.

When this man dies society loses $3,217.03 of its economic capital. But the professional man, the specialist, is most valuable at the age of forty. When he dies, according to these statistics, society sustains a loss of $13,207.43.

Moreover—
The laborer grows less valuable in dollars and cents after thirty, while the economic worth of the professional man remains at about the same figure up to the age of fifty. After fifty his value grows slightly less.

To illustrate:
Take the laboring man at sixty-five. His value to society is small. He cannot render much service. From being worth $3,217.03 at thirty his value has decreased until he is worth only $504.07. But—

The specialist is still quite valuable to the world at sixty-five. He is worth almost as much as he was at forty or fifty. There is no such sharp decline in value as in the case of the laborer.

Mind you—
When the specialist is here spoken of the term does not necessarily include men of college education. The specialty may be that of an inventor or a breeder as well as that of a doctor or lawyer or preacher.

Nor do I undertake to say that morally considered the work of the specialist should receive a larger pay than that of the laborer. All honest service should be well paid for. I am only saying that as society is now constituted the specialist draws more pay and is rated at a higher figure.

Plainly, then, the way to make yourself more valuable to the world, to your family and to yourself is to educate yourself to do something better than the average man can do it.

The world is asking of you today not so much—
What do you know?
It is asking beyond all else the question—
What can you do?

SEEK TO ESTABLISH EXISTENCE OF ALLEY

John W. Peters in Suit Against Fred R. Jones Claims New Bluff Street Building Encroaches On Alley.

Suit to establish the existence of an alley in the rear of his property on East Milwaukee street has been brought by John W. Peters against Fred R. Jones in the circuit court, and testimony was taken before Judge Grimm today.

It is claimed by the plaintiff in the action that the new three-story brick building built by Mr. Jones on North Bluff street in the rear of the hotel London encroaches on the alley and covers more ground than was his right to take. At the session of the court this morning various warrants, deeds containing the descriptions of the property of the plaintiff and other documents pertaining to the case were introduced as testimony.

Witnesses called this afternoon were Leonard J. Jorg, Alfred Jorg and Edward Jorg, sons of the late Frances X. Jorg, who owned the property adjoining the hotel London and George C. Sutherland who was purchased by Mr. Peters. There were several other witnesses to be called but it was expected that the suit would be finished today.

Assessment Cases.
The five cases arising out of the recent reassessment of the city of Janesville were heard before Judge Grimm in the circuit court this morning. The cases are actions for writs of certiorari brought by the Loveloy, Carlo and Jeffrie estates against Roy M. Cunningham, city clerk, in regard to the action taken by the board of review of the reassessment which allowed the assessed valuation on certain pieces of the plaintiff's property to remain when they had introduced sworn testimony to show that the assessed figures were unreasonable. The cases were taken under advisement.

State Treasurer A. H. Dahl has mailed to the city treasurer a draft on the Marine National Bank of Milwaukee for $1,468.23, the amount allowed the city by the state on the account of fire department dues. Previously the city collected these dues, but by a recent statute they must be paid to the state insurance commissioner, who in turn pays it to the city. Another Precocious Child.
A director of one of the great transcontinental railroads was showing his three-year-old daughter the pictures in a work on natural history. Pointing to a picture of a zebra, he asked the baby to tell him what it represented. Baby answered "Coty." Pointing to a picture of a tiger in the same way, she answered "Kitty." Then a lion and she answered "Dogy." Plated with her seeming quick perception, he then turned to the picture of a chimpanzee and said: "Baby, what is this?" "Papa,"—Woman's Journal.

SOLDIER, AUTHOR, HERO, IS HOWLAND

Capt. Charles B. Howland, of the Twenty-first Infantry, U. S. A., is a fighter, author, hero, and soldier. He recently voluntarily risked his life and saved the lives of twelve men. For this act of bravery the government presented him with a magnificent gold medal. Captain Howland has just completed his book on the latest of opinions of the Judge Advocate General. By order of the war department it will go into effect in the army at once. The authorities proclaim this work an innovation in military law as all important opinions and decisions of the department since 1892 are so arranged that they automatically decide cases that come up before commanders without their having to be referred to Washington for review and decision. Captain Howland is a native of Ohio and brother of Congressman Howland of that state.

Curious Bits of History

While President Jefferson was negotiating with France for the purchase of Louisiana Territory he transmitted to congress one very remarkable document. It was an abstract he had prepared of certain papers relating to the territory, and pictured the country in the most glowing colors. It told of a tribe of Indians of gigantic stature; of bluffs 300 feet high, faced with stone and carved by nature into what appeared like a multitude of antique towers; of a vast prairie country whose soil was too rich for the growth of trees. But most marvelous of all was an immense mountain of pure salt. This was said to be located about 1,000 miles north of New Orleans and near the Mississippi river, and to be 180 miles long and 45 miles wide, with no trees or shrubs on it. All glittering white it stood, and from its base issued great streams of pure salt water. Jefferson had been misled by the fairy tales of travelers. His political opponents had no end of fun with him in after years about his "salt mountain."

Nature's Danger Colors.
The strong yellow and black marking of the European salamander is what is called a "warning" coloration. Just as is the yellow and black outfit of the poisonous wasp. Animals learn to leave the yellow and black living untouched, and tentative bites are thus avoided by the creatures so marked.

Curious Bits of History

While President Jefferson was negotiating with France for the purchase of Louisiana Territory he transmitted to congress one very remarkable document. It was an abstract he had prepared of certain papers relating to the territory, and pictured the country in the most glowing colors. It told of a tribe of Indians of gigantic stature; of bluffs 300 feet high, faced with stone and carved by nature into what appeared like a multitude of antique towers; of a vast prairie country whose soil was too rich for the growth of trees. But most marvelous of all was an immense mountain of pure salt. This was said to be located about 1,000 miles north of New Orleans and near the Mississippi river, and to be 180 miles long and 45 miles wide, with no trees or shrubs on it. All glittering white it stood, and from its base issued great streams of pure salt water. Jefferson had been misled by the fairy tales of travelers. His political opponents had no end of fun with him in after years about his "salt mountain."

Nature's Danger Colors.
The strong yellow and black marking of the European salamander is what is called a "warning" coloration. Just as is the yellow and black outfit of the poisonous wasp. Animals learn to leave the yellow and black living untouched, and tentative bites are thus avoided by the creatures so marked.

The Old Philosopher.
"Don't reach out for all the world," said the old philosopher, "and yet, if you don't, the other fellow may grab it, and you'll find yourself without an acre of ground to stand on!"—Atlanta Constitution.

E. M. Markham, 521 W. Mill St., Winona, Minn., was cured of a severe case of kidney trouble and says: "My kidney action was slow frequent, and I lost much sleep by it. I could not even carry a small load. I took Foley Kidney Pills and they first gave great relief and then cured me. I gladly recommend them for what they did for me." Badger Drug Co.

HEART AND HOME TALKS
BY BARBARA ROYD

The Graduate and the Prizes of Life.

THE graduate steps forth from school, with her head crammed full of knowledge. At least, it is supposed to be, and we will give her the benefit of the doubt. She thinks she is prepared for the life-problems awaiting her, and that all she has to do to solve them is to use the knowledge she has acquired.

But a little grappling with these problems soon opens her eyes to some new facts of which she was unaware. She can use the arithmetic and the grammar and the spelling and the stenography she has learned in school. But she has vastly more to do than merely to use them. She finds herself in a new world, a new phase of existence, with conditions and problems of its own. And these call for study and mastery quite as much as did the problems of mathematics and Latin and physics that in the past confronted her in the classroom.

If she goes into the business world and is ambitious to climb to the top of the ladder, she finds she has much more to do than merely use the stenographic symbols she has learned, or figure out discount and percentage.

If she assumes the care of a home, her duties bring her many more problems than the temperature of the oven for baking, and the proper way to sweep and dust a room.

And these same conditions hold good no matter what field of labor she enters. She has learned certain necessary things in school. But she has entered a new school now with problems and tasks of its own.

And this school is far more important than the classrooms she has left. Its tasks are harder. Its prizes richer, more joy-giving. But though they call for other faculties to be brought to bear upon them, fortunately the method of mastering them is the same. The thoroughness and carefulness of the classes now behind her, if brought to bear upon her new tasks, will carry her steadily upward toward honors in life's school.

Exactly the same procedure as in the classrooms must be hers in life's school, if she wants to be counted a good student. In her classes she could not take up higher mathematics until she had mastered the simpler parts of arithmetic; she could not be passed on to rhetoric and English until she knew grammar. And a superficial cramming of these at the end of a term did not in the long run answer. When it came to solid, serious work, if she did not understand thoroughly the fundamentals, she went to pieces. And it is the same in the new problems awaiting her. She must build solidly, thoroughly, step by step. And then, as she mounts, she will have under her feet always a firm foundation.

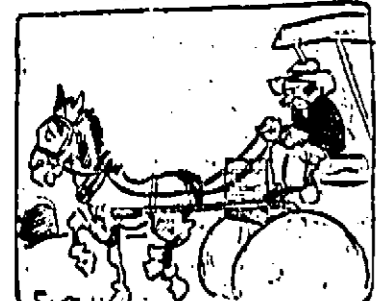

The same inexorable law is seen in the games we play for prizes. We must play for the prize from the beginning. We cannot play carelessly and indifferently at the start, and then hope to make up by attention at the end. We must win that coveted star for each game, and then we need have no misgivings as to the result.

And so the ambitious girl graduate, setting out on her life-work and wanting it to be happy and successful, should put right at the head of her list of resolves, the determination to be thorough, to be dependable, to put every stone into the life-structure she is building, just as perfectly as she can.

DINNER STORIES

"There never was Amos's equal for an up-and-down good nature," said Mrs. Clifford in speaking of her deceased husband to the new summer board.

"My son Joe always said, 'pa was more patient than Job.' 'I tell you,' she continued, 'you can figure for yourself how patient Amos was by this. Our old horse, Dandy, would get the rein under his full an' keep it there off 'n' on for ten miles without Amos's getting mad.'"

In a production of a play there is an important person who is never seen and should not be heard by the audience, and yet he may speak more lines than the principal actor. It is the prompter. Here is a description of a prompter's labors, written by one of the genus:

"I, as prompter, had been kept very busy throughout the piece. In addition to keeping the actors on their lines it was my duty to make all the outside noises. I had screamed 'Help!' I had shouted 'Kill him!' I had dropped planks to cover up deficient pistol reports. I had thundered, marched like an army, and howled like an infuriated rabble inflated by drink. The last straw came when the horse, supposed to be pursued by hounds, sailed to the wings and bowed.

"Hark, you fool bark! Why don't you bark, you idiot?"

The ready wit of the late Eugene F. Ware, author of "The Washwoman's Son" and other poems is shown in the following story:

He was giving a dinner at his home in Kansas City, Kan., the place to which he had retired after he resigned from the office of pension commissioner at Washington under Roosevelt.

The guests were equally divided between Missourians, from the twin city across the line, and Kansans. All present had imbibed the spirit of their genial, humorous host.

Said a Missourian: "You Kansans always have your brass bands going and your flags flying. We from Missouri got tired of your cocksureness. Tell me, what have you decided about the hen, for instance does she sit or does she set?"

"We don't bother about things like that," flashed Ware. "What concerns us, when she cackles, is, has she laid an egg or has she lied?"

Most anyone can be an editor. All an editor has to do is to sit at his desk six days in the week, four weeks of the month and twelve months in the year, and "edit" such stuff as this:

"Mrs. Jones of Last Greek lot a capon-pen for $10 last week and put herself in the pantry."

"A mischievous lad of Matherton threw a stone and struck a companion in the alley last Thursday."

"John Doe climbed on the roof of his house last week looking for a leak and fell striking himself on the back porch."

"Willie Harold Green was escorting Miss Violet Wise home from a church social last Saturday night a savage dog attacked them and bit Mr. Green on the public square."

"Daniel 'Trimmer' of Lebanon was playing with a cat last Friday when it scratched him on the veranda."

"Mr. White, while harnessing a bronco last Saturday, was kicked just south of the corn crib."

CORPORATION HEAD EMPLOYEES TRAINER.

"If you chew well," says Mayor Gaynor of New York, you do not eat nearly as much, but you derive much more benefit, and always have a good stomach. I am not a Fletcherite. Men in middle life whose work is strenuous find that methods of improving health by diet, exercise, optimism and other means are as practical as any other means of increasing efficiency. The head of one of the most successful corporations finds it profitable to employ a trainer who gives him exercise every morning and watches carefully his diet and other hygienic conditions, much as a trainer does wrestlers or other athletes. The time is not far distant when the physician will devote most of his attention to preserving the health and efficiency of his clients, instead of treating their ailments.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

THE MOTHER WHO WAS TOO BUSY.

IN A BEAUTIFUL big back yard upon which one of my study windows looks, seven youngsters were having the time of their lives the other day; and the central feature of all their fun was a most wonderful tent constructed out of two shawls and a sheet. The sheet was stretched from the back piazza roof to the clothes line, the shawl formed one side, and the grey shawl the other. I watched the whole construction of this affair from the moment when the gigantic idea was advanced in conference, to the moment when the tent was finished, and the seven youngsters trooped proudly in.

And as I watched, there suddenly came to me from across the years—as poignantly as if it were something actual like a fragrance or a strain of music—the memory of similar good times of my own, centering around similar undertakings. I remembered one glorious Saturday spent in building a string telephone from my window to the window of the little boy next door; and another dedicated to manufacturing an aquarium out of an old wash pail, a few water weeds, some minnows and three luckless pollywogs; and still another holiday when we built a house in the woodpile, and fitted it up like a log cabin, and played pioneer all the long afternoon.

How I used to trot in and out of the house, excited, busy and absolutely happy! How I used to rush to the little mother for the string for the telephone, the wash pail for the aquarium, an old blanket for the log cabin, and mercy knows what not! And how patiently she always gave them to me!

You see, she was a mother who understood.

Are you that, you mothers who are reading this? When the convalescence of the seven decided to have a tent the other morning, they suggested to their separate homes in search of materials. From one house came the shawl; from another came the sheet and the grey shawl; but from two homes the scouts came back empty handed. You see, in such of these homes there was a mother who did not understand, who was "too busy."

Mothers and fathers, especially mothers, don't forget that little things like these are very big to children. Disproportionately big! A child thing may mean so much fun to them, may give them more pleasure, perhaps, than some of your most expensive formal gifts. Can't you manage to have the time to find the shawl?

I used to visit sometimes at a home where the children were never allowed any such liberties, where all such requests were invariably denied. "The home was expensive and beautiful, but the children liked to go to other homes to play. And now that they are grown up they are never so happy as when they are away visiting."

Little things like these mean so very much to children that we must be careful how we refuse and deny, for we may be spoiling more happiness than we have any idea of.

HOUSEHOLD TALKS

Henrietta
D. Grauel

The first stage in the making of cheese is when the curd is separated from the whey. This is done by heating the milk to a given temperature, varying according to the season, and afterwards adding a certain proportion of rennet. When the cheese is to be colored, the dyeing matter is put in before the rennet. In less than half an hour after the heat has been applied the curdulation has so far progressed that the curd, from which the whey has been drawn, is ready to be cut.

Almost the only instrument used in the making of cheese is the curd-knife, a curious looking arrangement something like a double comb with long teeth. The immature cheese is both cut and stirred with this, the curd being separated into small bits, none of them being larger than an ordinary walnut. The stirring and heating must go on until the curd has reached a proper stage of what is called "digestion." It is then torn into narrow strips like ribbons, for the curd by this time is as firm in fiber as the breast of a roasted chicken, and indeed looks like it.

These strips are then fed into the salting mill, where they are thoroughly mixed with salt, and made ready for the cheese press. Enormous pressure is applied in this cheese press in order that all the whey that by any possibility remains may be squeezed out.

From the press the cheese is taken to the drying room, a large airy chamber, where it is left for days, months, or even years, according to the quality desired. It is frequently turned, and much care is expended on it. All cheese must go through the same stages, the different varieties being made by certain combinations of cream and skimmed milk.

Cheese has as much nutrition as the same amount of meat—or even more; it is more costly and gives us a chance in our diet and that is what we are all looking for.

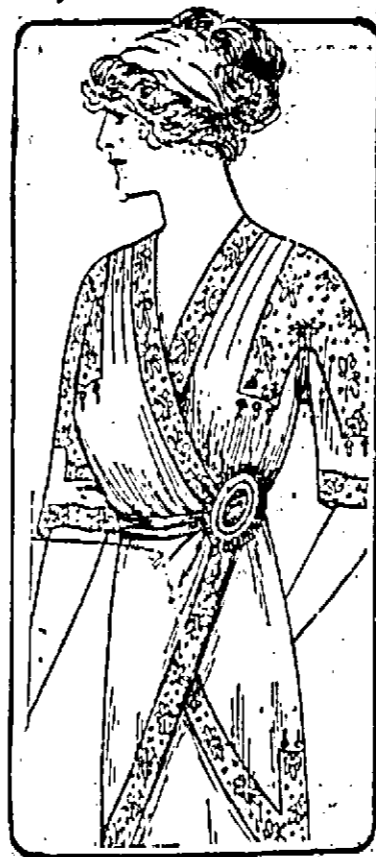

Sandwiches—Sandwiches should be made from bread which is at least a day old, for it is then neither too stiff nor too spongy. If the bread is too old the sandwiches will be heavy and unpalatable; if too porous there will not be sufficient backing for the filling. The bread is best buttered on the loaf before the slices are cut, and these should be about one-quarter of an inch thick. Two slices of bread should be laid together after being cut from the loaf so as to have no difficulty in making them later. They are then ready for any filling which may be decided upon.

After all the sandwiches are made the crumbs may be cut off if desired, by using a sharp carving knife. Press the sandwiches together and cut diagonally across; they are then wrapped, two together, in wax paper. If the paper which comes inside cracker boxes is saved it will come in very useful at this time. All are then wrapped in a damp napkin and laid on a plate in the refrigerator until needed. If the outline is to start early in the morning the sandwiches may be made the night before, and if left in the damp napkin will be perfectly moist at noon.

Cream cheese and chives.—Beat the cream cheese with a silver fork, pouring in sufficient cream to blend it nicely; then sprinkle in some chopped chives. This makes a delicious filling for a cracker sandwich, spreading each cracker thickly, then putting two together.

Cheese sandwiches.—Beat thin slices of American and Swiss cheese laid between two slices of thin bread, a most palatable cheese sandwich is made as follows: Blend together the yolk of one hard boiled egg with one tablespoonful of melted butter until smooth, then add to this half a teaspoonful each of salt, pepper and mustard, blending each well with the mixture before adding the others.

THE REASON WHY

BY BROOKLYN

The president and manager of a large New York firm were deciding which of the two men they'd let go. A consolidation of offices made it possible to do without one.

"Hank has by far the quicker and brighter mind," said the president. "But here's what you have to stack up against that," argued the manager. "The other man always does what he's asked to. I can depend on him absolutely and besides he always works in unison with me. Hank doesn't. He comes along with a good excuse, but—"

"So the man who didn't get what most people would call the best deal from nature's brilliant mind—got the one position which was a promotion. And strange as it may seem to many, heads of businesses will no doubt agree that whether dealing with men or women employees they put dependability and adaptability ahead of mere ability."

"Hank" has become an awfully overworked word. The brainy are so apt to depend on flashes instead of steady plugging. Besides much of their ingenuity is spent on making good excuses when it isn't explanations that are wanted but results.

The young man or woman anxious to make good also often overlooks another thing. When you are forced to admire some brilliant spirit of a workman and get to wishing you had the kind of mind that comes by jump and starts don't overlook the very important law that minds, like muscles, grow by using.

A recent experiment of Nikola Tesla, the scientist whose alternating current made the long distance transmission of electric power possible, is a mechanical illustration of what steadily increasing powers working in unison can do that shows how mental processes work as well.

Tesla studied the well-known effect of the violin's note on a "who" glass which broke when the vibrations of the two became of the same frequency. So he tried something harder.

He had a steel link made two feet long and two inches thick. It was strong enough to support several tons. He attached to it an electric vibrator whose vibrations he could regulate to suit him. Then he tried to adjust it so it would vibrate in unison with the vibrations of the steel bar, as the notes and shocks of the world gave to the bar as to all matter, vibrations. For a long time he couldn't get them together. Then suddenly the vibrations of the two began to coincide. The stronger one of the vibrator began to push those of the bar, its expansions and contractions grew and grew. The strong bar, hard steel-bar, and throbbed like a heart. Finally the action of the vibrator had done what the blows of sledge hammers could not have. The bar flew in pieces.

What can't first the pull, then the strong pull, and then the pull altogether do? That's what not only gets things done but strengthens minds and muscles for bigger tasks. Tesla is now making a turbine which he says will send great ocean liners across the Atlantic in less than three days by making the same amount of steam now generated by the old turbines do more work.

It was lack of application, lack of working in the unison with his employer and his proneness to making excuses instead of getting results that went a long way toward making the hero of Edwin LeFevre's story, "The Reason Why," in the May number of Everybody's Magazine, a failure. The story will stand reading and re-reading by everyone who wants to do good work and be a forceful citizen. It is the calmest, most effective portrait of what makes a man and a country fail that has been brought out. Don't miss it. Young man or young woman.

The KITCHEN CABINET

PLANT flowers in the south's front yard.

Get out now seeds and blossom trees. An' let the soul come from an' hard. Sprout crocuses of new ideas. Yes, clean yer house, an' clean yer shed. An' clean yer barn in every part. But brush the cobwebs from yer head. An' sweep the snowbanks from yer heart.

—Sam Foss.

SOME GOOD OLD FASHION DISHES.

For those who prefer to make their own mustard to use on the table for corned beef and cabbage, the following is a good one to prepare:

German Mustard.—Mix one-half a cup of dry mustard with a fourth of a cup each of salt and sugar and a fourth of a teaspoonful of cayenne. Stir in two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, the juice of one onion and vinegar to make a thin paste.

The story is told of a fussy man at a hotel in the west who sat down to a dinner of pork and beans. He remarked to the landlord that he never ate pork and beans. The landlord replied: "Then help yourself to the mustard." He was not lacking in hospitality as long as there was mustard that wasn't refused.

Berry Muffins.—Mix thoroughly two cups of sifted flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Cream one-fourth of a cup of butter, add a half cup of sugar and the well-beaten yolk of one egg, a cup of milk and the flour mixture; beat well. Add the white of egg beaten stiff, and stir in a heaping cup of well-washed blueberries, drained and rolled in flour. Bake in muffin pans about 20 minutes.

Fried Apples.—Core and pare the apples, cutting in thin slices. Lay in a granite pan with butter, sprinkle with sugar and place in the oven to bake until tender. Serve around fried sausage. The apples may be fried in some of the sausage fat, adding a little sugar.

Serve hard sauce in the halves of lemons or oranges, decorate the edges with a scallop if liked.

Nellie Maxwell.

Calls for Perseverance.

"There are no cut-and-dried rules for making advertising successful. Each man has to work out in a large measure, his own salvation. There is, however, one sure way to make it pay, and that is by perseverance and common sense. There are no substitutes for these elements in advertising or anything else, for that matter."—Jed Scarborough.

WOMAN ESCAPES DREADFUL OPERATION

How She Was Saved From Surgeon's Knife by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mogadore, Ohio.—"The first two years I was married I suffered so much from female troubles and bearing-down pains that I could not stand on my feet long enough to do my work. The doctor said I would have to undergo an operation, but my husband wanted me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound first. I took three bottles and it made me well and strong and I avoided a dreadful operation. I now have two fine healthy children, and I cannot say too much about what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. LEE MANGES, R. F. D. 10, Mogadore, Ohio.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

HEALTH OF CHICKS
AND A CLEAN YARD
IMPORTANT FACTORS

Needs For Proper Growth of Chicks.
—Pit Falls to Avoid.

(By F. J. HOLT.)

Weather conditions have been such that seasonal articles would not apply as they should. Many who tried to rear chicks during the past few weeks, found that it was impossible to let them have the run of the yard, for fear that the dampness of the cold winds would chill and stunt them. But it has come to a time of the year when the cold and wet are bound to be less and chick rearing will have more pleasure to it than formerly.

There are two main factors in the rearing of your chicks that must be looked after, vitality in the chicks themselves and a clean ground on which to run them. You may feed the most perfectly balanced ration and keep a well-equipped medicine chest ready for every emergency, but the youngsters will fail to thrive up to robust adulthood unless they possess a strong physical vitality of good healthy parents, and at the same time are not allowed to run on ground that is foul. The man who has a large space of ground can clear of foul ground easily, but the one who has but a small piece of land for his birds must attend to the soil so that it will not become filled with disease germs. If the chicks are supplied with good fresh earth that is free from filth, they are in a fair way to get along.

The back-yard poultryman who has but little space at his command does not always use that space to the best advantage. The brood coops are placed in the same place year after year and as a result the chicks succumb to gases and other ailments. It does not matter whether the poultry plant consists of fifty acres or of fifty square feet, a certain portion should be used for rearing the chicks and for no other purpose. After the chicks are reared to maturity the soil used for that purpose should be cleaned. This can be done by digging it up, level it off, dress it with slacked lime and let the frost, rain and other elements do the rest until the next rearing season comes. Or if you wish you may plant some vegetable matter on that ground and let it be free to grow all the season, keeping the fowls off from it at all times. Then when the next season comes that space will be a good healthy place to rear the birds.

If you have good strong chicks and a clean piece of ground, you must then consider the brood coops. They must be clean, dry and roomy. Be sure that they have been thoroughly overhauled since the last brooding season. When overhauling them it is wise to scrub them thoroughly, then whitewash and allow to dry. In that way you destroy all the vermin which may be in them. Such attention must be given to all coops whether they have been under cover or not. Be sure to have plenty of room in your coops for if you do not the hens will trample the chicks and you may lose a number of good birds. A coop should be at least two feet square and as high, but it would be better to have them a little larger. A removable floor in the best and a hinged top is practically a necessity. In front of the coop place a runway the width of the coop, and seven to ten feet long. These runs can be placed in front of the coop when the hen is sitting and be the exercise pen for her.

Dust the hen thoroughly when you take her from the coop. Make a preparation of kerosene and melted lard and use that to grease the small chicks on top of the head, under the wings and beneath the vent as soon as you take the hen from the nest. In this way you are warding off the ravages of head and body lice. Repeat this operation each week until the hen and her brood are separated.

Be sure that you make the chicks work for their living. Make them scratch for their feed every meal, for in that way they will become sturdy. When the litter becomes foul change it over if this has to be done every day. Nothing will produce bad results so quickly as filth. If the coops are on grass land they should be moved daily. If the run space is large the coops may be placed quite a ways apart and the runs discarded after the first week. Be sure to place the coops with their backs to the wind and in a place where the hot rays of the sun will not come directly into it.

PART II.
There are many pitfalls into which the city poultryman may fall. It is necessary that you be on the watch for these. One of the main who advertises eggs for sale from hens that lay two hundred and sixty to three hundred eggs per year. He has a very good imagination, but he forgets to give the facts. The average yield of good fowls is about one hundred and fifty, or even as low as one hundred and twenty, whereas most flocks in the country of mongrel types average less than sixty eggs per hen. Then there is the man who makes $2.75 per bird above all expenses. A few of the leading breeders of this country who are just masters at the business get fabulous prices for their wonderful specimens they raise each year, but they are few in numbers. Some of our commercial egg farmers are making large sums of money each year, but they are not making $2,000 from ten hens, about one thousand hens would come nearer to the truth of the matter.

After you are started look out for the catch-penny and alluring ads of the "wise guy," who wears kid gloves and who never saw a drooping board or who never wheeled a load of feed to the birds. He usually has some article to offer that is worthless to you in actual use, but which seems nice from his talk. Be sure and keep those pennies he is after for they will go a long way toward paying the feed bill.

And then you get your poultry papers, circulars and the like. There are scratch feeds, moult, tonic, egg producers, bee killers, "prepared" mashies, brooders, etc., assailing the eye at every turn. You wonder how it is possible to produce so many needed things for your fowls. After carefully reading all these I would advise that you go and talk with someone who knows something about poultry before deciding on what you need. It may be the means of saving you a few dollars. A few facts gathered from one who has had experience in the business is worth more than all the theory, etc., that can be read.

Do not be the one who is always taking up with new breeds. Do not have Lechons this year and then, barred Rocks next, then the next, and so on. Take time to select the breed and then push that one for all there is in it. If after a careful test of the breed you find that it is not what you want it is wise to change, but this test takes more than a year's time. Every breed has its good points as well as its bad. There is no best breed. It all depends upon the man and the place he has for them and the purpose he has for keeping them.

FISHING SEASON IS EAGERLY WAITED BY

Anxious Disciples of Isaac Walton all
Over the State—Comes Week
From Saturday.

June 1 will mark the opening of the fishing season in all the waters of the state, save three inland lakes, for all game fish except speckled trout. The season for those opened on April 15 and will close on Sept. 1.

The opening day under the old law for all other game fish except bass was May 25, but the last legislature changed it to June 1 and the season is now uniform for all game fish except trout.

In Big Green lake, Green Lake county, where the water remains cold later in the season, the fish spawn later and for that reason black bass and Oswego yellow bass are protected until July 1.

In Devil's lake, Sauk county, the season is closed for all game fish from Dec. 15 to the fifteenth day of the following June and in Mirror lake and Dell creek, Sauk county, the closed season is also from Dec. 15 to June 15.

It is unlawful to have more than fifteen black bass or Oswego yellow bass in one's possession at any one time or to take more than ten fishes in length. Pike must weigh at least a pound, muskellunge two pounds dressed, sturgeon four pounds dressed and trout must be at least six inches in length and not more than forty-five may be taken at any one time.

CROSSED THE RIVER
AFTER DIFFICULTY

Traffic Over Racine Street Structure Officially Opened This Morning Despite Obstacles.

When Caesar wrote his famous dispatch "Veni Vidi Vici" or "I came I conquered," he had no other message after the battle of Lake Erie. "We have met the enemy and they are ours." They had both overcome obstacles that seemed insurmountable in their day and age.

For years residents of Janesville, have discussed the project of constructing a bridge across the placid Rock at Racine street and despite mistakes in election ballots, finally decided to make the thought father of the deed. Then came further delays, legal and political, before actual construction began.

Winter came with the work incomplete and even the balmy days of spring while seeing the bridge an actually, and the finishing touches waiting for further untangling as to approaches.

"The bridge is there and there has been considerable discussion as to who should be the first to cross it. Some have suggested that Mayor Paterson, Commissioners Milnor and Cummings march solemnly across at the head of the Bowler City band, garbed in high silk hats and prince alberts, making an impressive sight."

It has even been suggested that there be a grand rush, similar to those at the opening of new government lands, that perhaps the cost of construction of the bridge could be particularly defrayed by selling chances for the coveted honor and other similar schemes presented. But alas, all these plans fall by the wayside. The bridge has been crossed, Charles Curtis and Herb Grifflay accomplished this feat this morning and now have the coveted honor of having driven across the river on the new bridge.

When Hannibal decided to invade Italy he must scale the Alps. His followers, tugged and strained at long ropes to haul their camp equipment over the mountain passes. Not less difficult was the crossing of Rock accomplished.

The west approach is far from complete. It is though climbing a mountain side but with Curtis leading the horse and Grifflay lifting the buggy over the high spots, the floor of the bridge proper was reached and the rest was easy.

While others may not attempt similar feats for several days, the first horse and buggy have driven across, the bridge has been dedicated and the coveted honor rests with Curtis and Grifflay, the two intrepid adventurers.

THE MUSICAL ART.

By Howard L. Rahn.

The musical art is a profession pursued by people who do not feel sure of $2.50 a day in any other avocation of human endeavor. People who pursue this profession for any length of time without catching up with it are liable to become embittered in spirit, and seek to gain a few lapa by inventing an addition to the old Italian method or guaranteeing to make the Kiesel quartet sound like an accordion solo in six lessons. The piano teacher is a person who is paid $1 a half hour under an iron-clad contract to convert a staid fingered vacuum into a virtuoso, and when the teacher fails to deliver, as happens once in a while, the pupil is sent to Europe to be veneered at father's expense. For a day teaching has often enabled its graduates to tell at a glance whether Brahms wrote the Anvil chorus or "The Village Blacksmith," and on that account it is quite popular with students who expected to be able to subjugate a few concertos in one term of twelve lessons. The vocal teacher is a sady-eyed misanthrope whose time is taken up in removing the splinters from the top patches of the amateur tenor. She is also required to take the raw and plastic Lyric soprano and enable her to gallop through Lucia's mad scene, hand in hand with a flute obbligato, without shuddering any of her vocal mechanism. Musical art is confined largely to juries conservatories, which exact large and costly quantities of four-fingered exercises, and resonance and ear-splitting cadences, adding the building in a very soothing and restful atmosphere. The musical critic is one who does not sing or play well enough to keep him away from his other work, but who is pleased at any time to establish the rating of visiting artists throughout all eternity. The life of the average musician is crowded full of culture and cafeteria lunches, neither of which can be exchanged for rent or carfare with any degree of success.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST

By
GENE STRATTON-PORTER

CHAPTER VII.

Wherein Elnora Receives a Warning
and Billy Appears on the Scene.

WHEN Mrs. Comstock entered the cabin and began the day's work, but mingled with the brooding bitterness of her soul was the vision of a sweet young face, glad with a gladness never before seen on it, and over and over she repeated,
"I wonder what he'll say to her?"

What he said was that she looked as fresh and sweet as a pinyon and to be careful not to step in the mud or scratch her shoe when she went to the cane.

Elnora found her key and opened the door. Not where she had placed it, but conspicuously in front lay her little heap of bills and a crude scrawl of writing beside it. Elnora picked up the note in astonishment.

"Elnora, the lord almighty is hiding you all right done you ever doubt it this mornin' of yours was took for some time ago but it is returned with letters for you and a box of 'Nurita,' the remedy that produces results.
You can feel it working.
Compounded by Magistral Chemical Co.,
Paterson N.J., New York.

Elnora began to tremble. She had glanced about. The dump on the cane had been trodden by large, roughly shod feet. She caught up the money and the note, thrust them into her guppie, locked the case and ran for the road.

She was so breathless and her face so white Elnora noticed it.

"What in the world's the matter, El-nora?" he asked as he helped her into the carriage.

"I am half afraid," she panted.

"Tut, tut, child!" said Wesley. "Nothing in the world to be afraid of.
What happened?"

"Uncle Wesley," said Elnora, "I had more money than I brought home last night, and I put it in my case. Someone has been there. The ground is all trampled, and they left this note."

"And took your money, I'll wager," said Sinton angrily.

"No," answered Elnora. "I read the note and, oh, Uncle Wesley, tell me what it means!"

Sinton's face was a study. "I don't know what it means," he said. "Only one thing is clear. It means somebody who doesn't really want to harm you has got his eye on you and he is telling you plain as he can not to give him a chance. You got to keep along the roads, in the open, and not let the biggest moth that ever flew tell you out of hearing of us or your mother. It means that, plain and distinct."

"Just when I can sell them; just when everything is so lovely on account of them. I can't—I can't stay away from the swamp. The Limberlost is going to buy the books, the clothes, pay the tuition and even start a college fund. I just can't."

"You've got to," said Sinton. "This is plain enough. You go far in the swamp at your own risk, even in daytime."

"Uncle Wesley," said the girl in a whisper, "last night before I went to bed I was so happy I tried to pray, and I thanked God for hiding me under the shadow of his wing. But how in the world could any one know it?"

Wesley Sinton's heart gave one great leap in his breast. His face was whiter than the girl's now.

"Was you praying out loud, honey?"
he almost whispered.

"I might have said words," answered Elnora. "I know I do sometimes.
I've never had any one to talk to, and I've played with and talked to myself all my life. You've caught me at it often, but it always makes mother angry when she does. She says it's silly. I forgot and do it when I'm alone. But, Uncle Wesley, if I said anything last night you know it was the merest whisper, because I'd have been so afraid of waking mother. Don't you see? I sat up late and did two lessons."

Sinton was standing himself. "I'll stop and examine the case as I come back," he said. "Maybe I can find some clue. That other—that was just accidental. It's a common expression."

All the Frenchiers use it. If I was going to pray that would be the very first thing I'd say."

The color came back to Elnora's face.

"Did you tell your mother about this money, Elnora?" he asked.

"No, I didn't," said Elnora. "It's dreadful not to, but I was afraid. You see, they are clearing the swamp so fast. Every year it grows harder to find things, and Indian stuff gets scarcer. I want to graduate, and that's four years unless I can double on the course. That means $20 tuition each year and new books and clothes. There won't ever be so much at one time again—that I know. I just got to hang to my money. I was afraid to tell her for fear she would want it for taxes, and she really must sell a tree or some cattle for that, mustn't she, Uncle Wesley?"

"On your life, you must!" said Wesley. "You put your little wad in the bank all safe and never mention it to a living soul. It don't seem right, but your case is peculiar. Every word you say is a true word. Each year you will get less from the swamp, and things everywhere will be scarcer. If you ever get a few dollars ahead, that can start your college fund. You know you are going to college, Elnora?"

"Of course I am," said Elnora.

She jumped from the carriage and soon found that with her books, her lunch box and the box of arrow points
she had a heavy load. She was almost to the bridge crossing the culvert
when she heard the distressed screams of a child. Across an orchard of the suburbs came a small boy, after him a big dog, urged by a man in the background. Elnora's heart was with the small flying figure in any event whatever. She dropped her load on the bridge and with practiced hand caught up a stone and flung it at the dog.

The beast curled double with a howl.
The boy reached the fence, and Elnora was there to help him over. As he touched the top she swung him to the ground, but he clung to her, clasping her tightly, sobbing and shivering with fear. Elnora carried him to the bridge and sat with him in her arms. For a time his replies to her questions were indistinct, but at last he became quieter and she could understand.

He was a little of a boy, nothing but skin covered bones, his burned, freckled face in a mortar of tears and dust, his clothing unspendably dirty, one great toe in a festering mass from a broken nail and sores all over the visible portions of the small body.

"You wouldn't set a dog on a boy for just taking a few old apples when you fed 'em to pigs with a shovel every day, would you?" he said.

"No, I wouldn't," said Elnora. "You'd give a boy all the apples he wanted if he hadn't any breakfast and was so hungry he was all twisted inside,
wouldn't you?"

"Yes, I would," said Elnora.

"If you had anything to eat you would give me something right now,
wouldn't you?"

"Yes," said Elnora. "There's nothing but just stones in the package. But my dinner is in that case. I'll gladly divide."

She opened the box. The famished child gave a little cry and reached both hands. Elnora caught them back.

"Did you have any supper?"

"No."

"Any dinner yesterday?"

"An apple and some grapes I stole."

"Whose grapes are you?"

"Old Tom Hillings."

"Why don't your father get you something to eat?"

"He does most days, but he's drunk
now."

"Hush! You must not!" said Elnora.
"He's your father!"

"He's spent all the money to get drunk, too," said the boy, "and Jimmy and Belle are both crying for breakfast. I'd 'a' got out all right with an apple for myself, but I tried to get some for them, and the dog got too close. Say, you can just throw, can't you?"

"Yes," admitted Elnora. She poured half the milk into the cup. "Drink this," she said, holding it to him.

The boy gulped the milk and swore joyously, gripping the cup with shaking fingers.

"Hush!" cried Elnora. "That's dreadful!"

"To say such awful words."

"Huh, pa says worse 'an that every breath he draws."

Elnora stared into the quaint little face and saw that the child was older than she had thought. He might have been forty by his hard, unchildish expression.

"Do you want to be like your father?"

"No! I want to be like you. Couldn't an angel be prettier 'an you? Can I have more milk?"

Elnora emptied the flask. The boy drained the cup. He drew a breath of satisfaction as he gazed into her face.

"You wouldn't go off and leave your little boy, would you?" he asked.

"Did some one go away and leave you?" questioned Elnora in return.

"Yes; my mother went off and left me and left Jimmy and Belle, too," said the boy. "You wouldn't leave your little boy, would you?"

"No."

The boy looked eagerly at the box.
Elnora lifted a sandwich and uncovered the fried chicken. The boy gasped with delight.

"Say, I could eat the stuff in the glass and the other box and carry the bread and the chicken to Jimmy and Belle," he offered.

Elnora silently uncovered the encased with preserved cherries on top and handed it and the spoon to the child. Never did food disappear faster.

The salad went next, and a sandwich and half a chicken breast followed.

"I better leave the rest for Jimmy and Belle," he said. "They're 'at light-in' hungry."

Elnora gave him the remainder of the carefully prepared lunch. The boy clutched it and ran with a sidewise hop like a wild thing.

Elnora covered the dishes and cup, polished the spoon, replaced it and closed the beautiful case. She caught her breath in a tremulous laugh.

"I Aunt Margaret knew that she'd never forgive me," she said. "It seems as if secrecy is literally forced upon me, and I hate it. What will I do for lunch? I'll have to sell my arrows and keep enough money for a reservance sandwich."

So she walked hurriedly into town, sold her points at a good price, deposited her funds and went away with a neat little bank book and the note from the Limberlost carefully folded inside. Elnora passed down the great hall that morning, and no one paid the slightest attention to her. The truth was she looked so like every one else that she was perfectly inconspicuous.

But in the east room there were members of her class. Surely no one intended it, but the whisper was too loud.

"Look at the girl from the Limberlost in the clothes that woman gave her!"

Elnora turned on them. "I beg your pardon," she said unsteadily; "I couldn't help hearing that! No one gave me these clothes. I paid for them myself."

Some one muttered, "Pardon me," but incredulous faces greeted her.

Elnora felt driven. Aunt Margaret selected them, and she meant to give Nurses are often very negligent in regard to keeping sunlight away from a sleeping baby's eyes. In parks and on the street one often sees a baby asleep in its carriage with the strong sunlight streaming over its face.

Grown-up humans know how their own eyes ache when they wake up in the morning with a glare of light on their faces. How much worse it must be for a baby's delicate eyes! Mothers should see that those to whom they intrust the care of their babies understand the importance of care in this respect.

and offered the little bed book." Surly you will believe that," she said.

"Why, of course," said the girl who first had spoken. "We met such a lovely woman in Brownlee's store, and she said she wanted our help to buy some things for a girl, and that's how we came to know."

"Dear Aunt Margaret," said Elnora,
"it was like her to ask you. Isn't she splendid?"

"She is indeed," chorused the girls.
Elnora set down her lunch box and books and unplanned her hat, hanging it beside the others. While her back was turned into the room came the girl of her encounter on the first day, walked to the rack and, with an exclamation of approval, took down El-nora's hat.

"Just the thing I have been wanting," she said. "I never saw such beautiful quills in all my life. They match my new broadcloth to perfection. I've got to have that kind of quills for my hat. I never saw the like. Whose is it, and where did it come from?"

No one said a word for Elnora's question, the reply and her answer had gone the rounds of the high school. Every one knew that the Limberlost girl had come out ahead, and Sadie Reed had not felt amiable when the little flourish had been added to Elnora's name in the algebra class.

Elnora's swift glance was pathetic,
but no one helped her. Sadie Reed glanced from the hat to the faces around her and wondered.

"Why, this is the freshman section.
Whose hat is it?" she asked again,
this time impatiently.

"That's the novel of the cornstalk," said Elnora, with a forced laugh.

The response was genuine. Every one shouted. Sadie Reed blushed, but she laughed also.

"Well, it's beautiful," she said, "especially the quills. They are exactly what I want. I know I don't deserve any kindness from you, but I do wish you would tell me at whose store you got those quills."

"Gladly," said Elnora. "You can't get quills like those at a store. They are from a living bird. Phoebe Slummers gathers them in her orchard as her penecocks shed them. They are wing quills from the males."

Then there was a perfect silence.
How was Elnora to know that not a girl there would have told that?

"I haven't a doubt but I can get you some," she offered. "She gave Aunt Margaret a great lunch, and those are part of them. I am quite sure she has more and would spare some."

ALWAYS LATE

Mrs. Green—She referred so much to her late husband. How long has he been dead?

Mrs. Wisco—He isn't dead. He's a newspaper man and never gets home till very late at night.

DECIDEDLY WEAK

Orville Deuber—I'm doing this painting in water color.

Nocker—Yes; there does not seem to be much spirit in it!

WHY WAIT?

Grace—I just refused to marry Jack. He said he would not be in a position to marry for a year.

Maud—Well, what of that?

Grace—Why, I know a man who is in a position to marry any time.

COULDN'T TRUST HIMSELF

Mrs. Kutting Hints—Oh! indeed! I suppose you are afraid you'll lose social caste if you carry a bundle.

Mr. Kutting Hints—No, I'm afraid I'd lose the bundle.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Gazette, May 23, 1872.

Methodist Camp Meeting: The Methodists of the Janesville district will hold a camp meeting at Marshall, Dane county, to commence on Thursday, June 6th, at 10:00 o'clock, a. m. and hold over the Sabbath. Preachers and people on charges, in this and other districts, are invited to attend.

Faulty Manuscript: The return papers of a Justice in the case of an appealed case puzzled the circuit court this morning. Neither judge, attorneys, clerk, nor any one else could decipher that manuscript until John Nichols attempted the task. He discovered it to be a Greek version of Paradise Lost. As the adjudication of the affairs of that estate did not come within the jurisdiction of this court, and as most of the witnesses are dead, it will probably be dropped from the court.

The pupils of the Blind Institute will give a concert next week.

Judge Lyons has been asked to deliver the address in this city on Decoration Day.

The senate investigation of the stolen treaty correspondence has been directed solely to members of that body. Each was required to produce his copy of the correspondence and swear that it had not been out of his possession. All but Senator Ames, of Mississippi, cleared themselves from suspicion, and he admitted that he had shown the correspondence to his family but to no one else.

Over ten thousand emigrants arrived at Castle Garden Tuesday, the largest number landed in one day since the establishment of the institution.

Oh, worry! for the frantic claps and those self-seeking winners who hope to collar pleasant snips if their men are the winners. I keep my growing pumpkin vine from bugs and worms protected; the lady will still be doing fine, no matter who's elected.

Proof That Dreams Come True.

"Yes, I'm going to move tomorrow," said Bortha, the colored washerwoman. "Yes, I knowed it last week. I dreamt it. Whenevah I be gins to dream of packin' my trunk and gettin' ready to go somewhere, the landlady, he comes the very next week for the rent. Yes, I'm going to move tomorrow."

UNCLE WALT

The Poet Philosopher

Copyright, 1909, by

WALT MASON

I will not argue things, my friend, or waste my time debating, for I have a harness here to mend, and other chores are waiting. Let candidates conduct their game—that sort of thing's expected—but things will go on just the same, no matter who's elected. The orators may rant and brag and hand out rosettes and stricture; by bookishness has laid outy confound her silly picture! and I must go and seek her nest, and see that she's corrected; and things will all be for the best no matter who's elected. The country's future is in doubt; it always was, my neighbor; and I, to help that future out, shall stay at home and labor; the threats of statesmen, don't distress or make my soul dejected; the land will hump along, I guess, no matter who's elected.

True Benevolence.

It is useless to talk of "sacrificing self to others unless there is something in self that others need." It is the full and rich life, not the poor and empty one, that can fill and enrich others. True benevolence, then, must obtain that which it would give. To acquire honorably money or leisure or power, to cultivate health and happiness, to gain knowledge and wisdom, to develop interest in human affairs, to cherish just principles and generous impulses, to fill the mind with pure and noble thoughts and the heart with tender love and sympathy—these things are essential.

PUBLIC IS ASKED TO AID IN THE MATTER

Persons Answering Fraudulent Advertisements Asked to Notify Gazette.

The Gazette is desirous of keeping out of its columns fraudulent advertising and asks the assistance of its patrons to that end.

There are any number of concerns in the country who make a living through a nicely worded advertisement, offering golden opportunities, and these unscrupulous people find fertile ground for work among the masses.

Many orders are received in the Gazette mail for advertising which are returned as objectionable and where there is a question as to the qualifications the advertisement is omitted. All newspapers have this experience.

But even with the utmost care there will be an occasional advertisement which will pass the scrutiny of the business department of the paper and find its way into the columns.

The Gazette will deem it a favor if you will report to this office any trouble which may have been experienced through the answering of such an advertisement.

Earnestness Above All.

Some happy talent, and some fortunate opportunity, may form the two sides of the ladder on which some men mount, but the rounds of that ladder must be made of stuff to stand wear and tear; and there is no substitute for thoroughgoing, ardent and sincere earnestness. Never to put one hand to anything on which I could throw my whole self; and never to affect depreciation of my work, whatever it was, I find now to have been my golden rule.—David Copperfield.

Think of This.

Think over the worrying you did yesterday. It certainly did you no good, but it certainly did you harm. Think of this the next time you feel grumpy.—Atchison Globe.

F. R. Welles, 1006 Forest St., Racine, Wis., had an acute attack of kidney trouble and knew at once what would cure him.
